"Pressestimmen ?New Feast?a cookbook full of rich Middle Eastern vegetarian recipes that span the region?Framed by lush photographs, the recipes celebrate the diversity of the Levant.? ?Saveur'Why didn?t anyone think of this before? Middle Eastern food has always been delicious, but for the most part it goes on unchanged from generation to generation. ?

Greg Malouf, an Australian of Lebanese ancestry, has cast a new eye on every Middle Eastern dish he cooks. "The food is transformed, but somehow it retains the integrity of the original recipe. Everything comes to the table looking like a piece of art, and it ends up tasting even better than it looks." Every restaurant in Morocco offers pastilla, layers of thin pastry stuffed with pigeon. Mr. Malouf substitutes rabbit for the pigeon, and devises as "aky and tasty a pastry as has ever emerged from an oven. The result is one of the most magnificent dishes I've eaten. I've dreamt about it ever since." —Stan Slesser, Personal Journal, The Asian Wall Street Journal '[One of]The Most Anticipated Cookbooks of Fall 2014' —Eater

The next day's hangover morphed quickly to pleasure at Mo Mo, in a gorgeously decorated cellar. ...Chef Greg Malouf is a Melbourne native of Lebanese parentage who, has, for more than a decade, created his own contemporary Middle Eastern cuisine. "The desserts in particular deserve a mention: I had a sampler of rose-petal Turkish delight brûlée, muhallabeya (Lebanese milk pudding with Syrian apricot and sesame citrus biscuits), and pear baklava with dates and ginger ice cream—a new spectrum of subtle, perfumy "avours." —Anthony Bourdain, American Gourmet

NOTE: Greg Malouf featured on Anthony Bourdain's Kitchen Confidential 'I'm sold on him. I don't know of any other chef that can match Greg Malouf's versatility and talent who is working in the medium—I like his swing back and forth between old and new and his sensitivity with spices is brilliant—I say this because I cooked through his latest book. He is a brilliant chef. I like the way his food plays with my head.' —Paula Wolfert, chef-author

The food transcends some of the traditions in presentation but remains authentic in taste. —The New York Times

Über den Autor und weitere Mitwirkende Greg Malouf has inspired a generation of young chefs and transformed Middle Eastern food with his passion for the flavors of North Africa and the Middle East. He has worked in France, Italy, Austria, UK, Australia and Hong Kong and has recently opened a new restaurant in Dubai. Lucy Malouf is a London-based writer, she contributes regularly to newspapers and articles as well as a number of food and wine-based websites. Greg and Lucy have co-authored 6 books including the best-selling Malouf: New Middle Eastern Food."
